"Conservation is innate to India's ethos. While wildlife faces threat across the globe and India's flora and fauna's demand continues in illegal global markets, in keeping with our stringent provisions for protection of wildlife under the Wild life (Protection) Act, 1972, efforts towards creating awareness among public at large

A thriving industry with organized wildlife crime chains spreading across the world, in India, illegal trade in wildlife has seen a sharp rise. "There is an urgent need for awareness, action and stringent enforcement of laws to put an end to all illegal wildlife trade threatening biodiversity and conservation in the wild. This campaign is an important step forward in creating much-needed awareness on wildlife trafficking which threatens the very survival of these species," said Atul Bagai, Head, UN Environment India.

Recent media reports on seizures of illegally traded species and their parts at airports is a growing indication of rampant wildlife trafficking. ## Seminar promises yet to be delivered on AHMEDABAD: For the last decade, saving Ahmedabad's heritage has failed to become a priority for the civic body. The situation has not changed even two years after the walled city was inscribed a World Heritage City. Last September, disaster mitigation experts from across the country congregated in Ahmedabad to be part of National Institute for Disaster Management (NIDM) and Ahmedabad Municipal Corporation (AMC) deliberations on disaster risks in historic cities, where the Ahmedabad case study figured prominently. As a test case, 64 homes in Shantinath ni Pol were picked for a study. Here more than 50% of the 64 homes were found to have been altered and lost their famed 'living heritage' characteristics. Experts at the seminar had said that this was the case at the majority of pol houses, which are vulnerable not just to fire or collapse during the rains, but also to man-made disasters. Assistant professor with NIDM and the coordinator of the study, Chandrani Bandopadhyay had warned, "The Walled City did not suffer much damage in the 2001 earthquake, but a heavy spell of rain can now damage buildings.
