

Indian-made foreign liquor in 'medical equipment' boxes boxes Vadodra cops

Ahmedabad : With checking and patrolling on the border tightened amid the pandemic, bootleggers in Gujarat too become more innovative while trying to cook a snook at the law. One such latest attempt is the trick to dress up the contraband in medical equipment boxes and parcel these to the desired location. Vadodra crime branch officials stumbled upon a few bootleggers who were couriering liquor to the state while they were in another state to investigate a criminal case. "We were investigating a heist and our team had gone to Chandigarh recently. It was during the investigations and questioning of a few persons that we learnt about bootleggers now using courier service to ferry illicit liquor to the state," a crime branch official told TOI. Such liquor parcels are sent from Chandigarh to different cities in Gujarat. "The bootleggers label 'medical equipment' on the boxes filled with liquor bottles trying to hoodwink scrutiny and also ensuring these parcels are handled with care," the official said, adding that amid the Covid crisis, a lot of medical equipment is transported from one place to other, and hence wouldn't create any suspicion. "The bootleggers send some of their men to Chandigarh to take delivery of the liquor. They then courier it to Gujarat which is received here by their gang. The stock is then distributed to others," the police said. "Bootleggers from Ahmedabad are using this trick and we have informed our counterparts there about the suspects," the crime branch sleuth added. Also, the police will now keep an eye on the courier movements

In the city and intercept or check the large consignments that may appear suspicious. Ahmedabad city crime branch officers said that they have not got any input that liquor bottles are smuggled into boxes meant for medicines for Covid-19 but they are vigilant on movement of couriers and other parcels in private buses. A city police officer said that they had on June 22 held a man from the Sola area of city with liquor bottles worth Rs 9 lakh and he had bought the alcohol in boxes of biscuits, snacks and clothes. A police officer said that accused Vinod Patel, 54, had brought the premium liquor bottles in a private bus in parcel boxes which he notified as relief for Corona patients.
